Immigration to Europe

Due to new and ongoing crises in conflict zones, the number of people coming to Europe, and Germany in particular, has reached an unprecedented level. In addition to humanitarian aid, rapid and practical training programs are needed for the people arriving on European shores. Many of these individuals are highly qualified and a significant portion is made up of young men and women who will soon enter professional working life.

This immigration wave provides Europe with the opportunity to tackle both its existing skills shortage and its emerging demographic problem. However, providing education and trainings that fit the current needs of the market is absolutely essential.
